HOW DELIVERANCE CAME.

Peace Purchased at the Expense of a Bright Red Jersey.

I was sitting at my desk writing one day, says a writor in the Philadelphia Times, when I was startled by a voice close beside me. Looking up I saw a tall, slim negro girt, wearing a most dilapidated costume of many colors and pieces. Her face was pinched and ashy, her eyes a kind of muidy hazel, the peculiar combination giving her an unusual appearance.

"Oct any ole clo's yer wanter tradel" she inquired, abruptly.

"No, I think rot," I answered, glancing at the baskets of berries which hung on her "Eleven, then."

THE MODERN WOMAN.

"Nellie, dear," hegan young Mr. Towers to his bride, who had just come in from an early constitutional, "you..."

"Helen, if you please, dear. Let us begin life in good form; Nellie is obsolete."

"Well, then, Helen, I' dilke to have you drive with me after breakfast."

"Impossible, William; at 9:30 I practice with the pulleys and weights."

"Well, ton will do."

"At ten I begin muscular exercise, the neck and chest movement and ankle exercise."

"Eleven, then."

inquired, abruptly.
"No, I think rot," I answered, glancing at the baskets of berries which hung on her arms.

"Better git somerdeachere berries; doy's mighty nice. I'il take mes' any thing for 'em. Gimme some ole med'cine ef you got any. Some uv us is purty nigh always. ck." I shuddered to think of the consequences

When I had begun to despuir of ever ridding myself of my "old man of the sea," when I saw a long vists of years strutching out before me in which I must be trading and giving in trade, happily we moved to a distant street.

I enjoyed a respite of two months in my new home unmolested by the trading Josephine.
